Biodynamic preparation makers convergence

23 – 25 July, 2013

Historic Tahlee, Port Stephens, NSW

TAHLEE HOMESTEAD

Tahlee Homestead was the original Australian headquarters of the Australian Agricultural Company in 1826, remaining part of the AA Co until 1849.

Walter Burley Griffin envisaged Port Stephens as suitable for the Australian capital city and some of the planned subdivisions remain in place in the area.

Since 1959 Tahlee House is owned by the Gospel Service Ministries who offer accommodation and conference facilities on the banks of the Karuah River.

Biodynamics is growing steadily around Australia and the biodynamic preparations are at the heart of this movement. This convergence is an opportunity for those who have an interest in preparation making and the future of biodynamics in Australia to share experiences, swap ideas and explore ways of contributing to Australia's agricultural and environmental future.

The theme of the recent annual International Biodynamic Conference at Dornach in Switzerland was Alliances for our Earth. Alliances allow individuals and groups with very different origins and activities to work towards goals that are shared. Alliances are moving gatherings of individuals and groups that can be seen to be at odds but share common goals. This conference was about the biodynamic movement developing skills to participate in such alliances.

Shane Martin and Hamish Mackay both went to Dornach and returned with the decision to bring biodynamic people of initiative and enthusiasm together to encourage and support each other to make a wider contribution. The convergence will be held at the Tahlee Christian Community and Ministry Centre conference facility.

This will be an opportunity for participants to bring, share and explore their biodynamic preparation research, practices and questions. From this we will prioritise the issues allocate appropriate time for discussion. This is purposely held mid year outside the preparation making time to allow greater participation.
